Credit Union of Georgia Sponsors Teachers, The Musical

(Roswell, GA) Credit Union of Georgia was the 2009 Title Sponsor of Teachers, The Musical, written by Cobb County School District Elementary School Teacher, Robin Seidman. The production, which ran weekends during the month of October at the Kudzu Playhouse in Roswell, tells the story of the every day challenges educators face.

Credit Union of Georgia representatives attended the event, setting up a table with promotional giveaways and greeting patrons who attended the show.

As an Educator's Credit Union, Credit Union of Georgia has great appreciation for the local educational community and is honored to participate in events such as these that serve to support local schools and educators.

Credit Unions are member-owned, not-for-profit financial institutions that provide many of the same financial services that banks do, including checking and savings accounts, loans, mortgages, credit cards, home equity loans, and much more. However, they are uniquely different because any money made by the credit union is returned to its members/owners in the form of higher dividends and lower lending interest rates.

Since 1960, Credit Union of Georgia has been a part of the north metro Atlanta community. Credit Union of Georgia is one of the most stable financial institutions in the nation, according to Bauer's Financial Reports — an authority on financial institution stability.

As a state chartered credit union, Credit Union of Georgia is strictly regulated by the Department of Banking and Finance and the National Credit Union Administration, an agency of the U.S. government and insured by the National Credit Union Administration, NCUA.
